Re: Notice of Security Incident

Dear Sir or Madam:

We provide this notice on behalf of Vets Plus, Inc. (Vets Plus) in connection with a recent data security incident that may have impacted the personal information of one Maryland resident. This notice explains the incident and measures we have taken in response.

Vets Plus was a victim of a phishing attack and business email compromise. On December 7, 2021, our company learned that an unauthorized third party may have gained access to one of our company email accounts. In response to this information, Vets Plus retained a leading cybersecurity and digital forensics firm, and diligently investigated the incident. Based on this investigation, we confirmed on January 31, 2022, that an unauthorized third party had gained access to two employee email accounts. We immediately responded by implementing additional security measures, changed all passwords to our email system, required multi-factor authentication for email, and began an investigation.

Based on the evidence reviewed in our investigation, we have determined that certain files containing one Maryland resident's name and Social Security number may have been accessed or acquired during this incident.

A template of the mailed letter provided to the potentially affected Maryland resident is attached hereto.

Sincerely,

/s/ Aaron Charfoos

Fraud Alerts. There are two types of fraud alerts you can place on your credit report to put your creditors on notice that you may be a victim of fraud—an initial alert and an extended alert. You may ask that an initial fraud alert be placed on your credit report if you suspect you have been, or are about to be, a victim of identity theft. An initial fraud alert stays on your credit report for at least one year. You may have an extended alert placed on your credit report if you have already been a victim of identity theft and you have the appropriate documentary proof. An extended fraud alert stays on your credit report for seven years. You can place a fraud alert on your credit report by contacting any of the three national credit reporting agencies.

Security Freeze. You have the ability to place a security freeze, also known as a credit freeze, on your credit report free of charge.

A security freeze is intended to prevent credit, loans and services from being approved in your name without your consent. To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to any of the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that, if you are requesting a credit report for your spouse, this information must be provided for him/her as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past 5 years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The request must also include a copy of a government-issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, and display your name, current mailing address, and the date of issue.

If you believe you are the victim of identity theft or have reason to believe your personal information has been misused, you should immediately contact the Federal Trade Commission and/or the Attorney General's office in your home state.
